

EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT DICTATORSHIPS

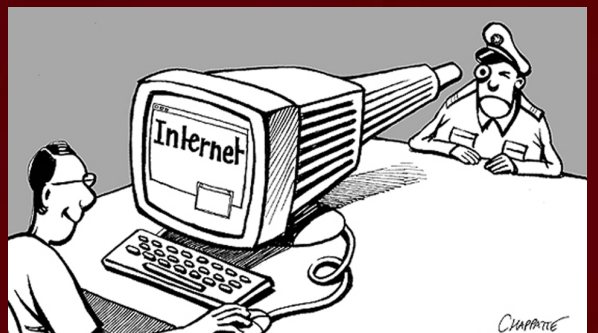

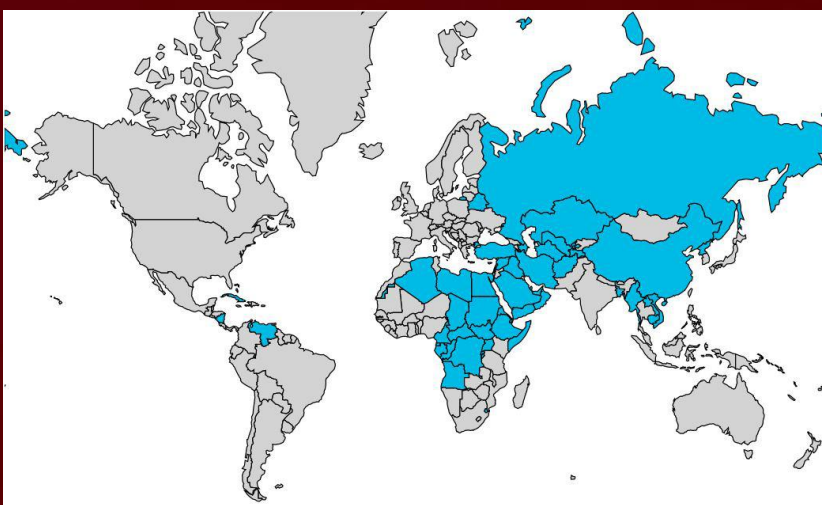

What are dictatorships?

A dictatorship is a type of government where a single person or a party has complete control. Consequently, citizens are very often suppressed.

Dictatorships across the world

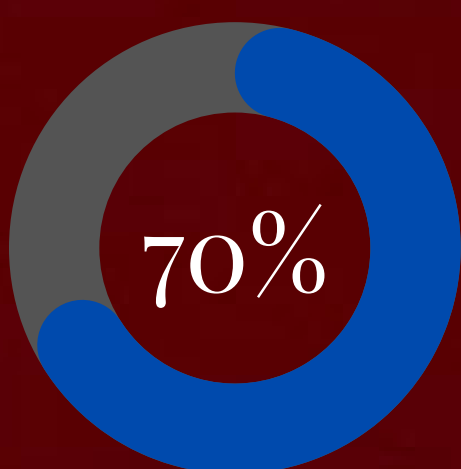

Countless dictatorships across the world. In 2020, 52 nations with a dictator regime ruled the country.

For example, North Korea where life is marked by strict state control, pervasive surveillance, and very limited information access. Citizens face a lack of freedom, poverty, and many economic troubles. Political repression and isolation from the outside world contribute a lot to the well-being of North Korean citizens.

Lack of Freedom

1. Freedom of Expression: Limited freedom of speech and use of media under dictatorships
2. Political Freedom: Single-party system, no free elections.
3. Freedom of Assembly: Restricted public gatherings, protests, and often suppression of civil society organizations.
4. Privacy and Rule of Law: Widespread surveillance is common in a dictatorship; a lack of judiciary.
5. Religious Freedom: Lack of religious freedom.
